1. The cabinet meetings during the first week of December devoted some time to the discussion on government policy in regard to Kladsko. The discussion was influenced by pressure from unofficial groups to aid Kladsko.
2. Although the policy has not yet been determined, it is felt that the government will decide to withdraw its circular note to the Big Four which was dispatched in April 1946, thus taking the Kladsko problem out of the hands of the Big Four during the Peace Conference with Germany and thus subscribing to the Russian stand that the question should be resolved by bilateral arbitration between Czechoslovakia and Poland. In the light of other frontier difficulties with Poland the chances for a settlement of the Kladsko dispute are very slim.
3. The leaders of the Kladsko maneuver feel that its failure may be attributed to the lack of success in obtaining any western reaction, either positive or negative, to the Kladsko claims.
